£1 per item to be valued. The maximum fee to be paid will be £5, anyone bringing more than five items will have the additional objects valued for free with all proceeds from the event going towards the upkeep of the Wedgwood Museum.

The award winning Wedgwood Museum is giving visitors the chance to discover the worth of their most precious treasures and antiques at a valuation day being held in conjunction with Halls of Shrewsbury. March 4th marks the first in a series of four Valuations Days scheduled for 2011 being held at the Wedgwood Museum. These Valuation Days will give visitors the chance meet Halls' specialist valuers where they will be able to ask for advice across a range of subjects including jewellery, paintings, European and Oriental ceramics, furniture, silver, clocks, watches coins, medals, works of art, toys and books. For many visitors the Valuation Day will provide a first opportunity to realise the value of their possessions and as financial pressures continue to impact, unearthing a hidden gem could prove very useful.
